EAGLES ENTERTAIN WORTHY PRESIDENT

Last Thursday evening the Eagles of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie celebrated their twentieth anniversary, entertaining their Grand Worthy President, Edward J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, Pa., and many visitors from the Peninsula and Bay Aeries.

Grand Worthy President Ryan was received with a tremndous ovation, the welcoming speech being made by Mayor H. H. Smith, who presented him with a beautifully decorated gold key.

The distinguished visitor was given the pleasure of presenting to the veteran Eagles a twenty year service pin, immediately following with a lengthy talk on Eagledom.

The social and booster committee had arranged a wonderful banquet, the banquet room being beautifully decorated with flowers, fraternal colors and banners.

The affair was a huge success, and the various committees were highly complimented by Worthy President William Bolger for the wonderful program presented.

Grand Worthy President Ryan, during the course of his address, said:

"The Fraternal Order of Eagles has 600,000 members. Its real estate exceeds $22,000,000. Its invested funds have passed the $10,000,000 mark. Cash on hand, lodge furnishings, and club fixtures are worth $10,000,000 more. During the year ending June 1, 1927, 90,000 men joined the F. O. E. More than half a million have come into our ranks since 1920. In finances and membership, ours today is the fastest growing fraternity in the United States.

"This is, above all else, an American organization. It is true that we have among us tens of thousands that have come from other lands. But they must have—and they must demonstrate—an abiding faith in American principles. For the Eeagles take a very real part in that Americanization movement whose object is to spread and to strengthen the governmental and social ideals upon which this republic rests. Our work in social welfare and in political fields—indeed our very ritual itself—is based upon American ideals. As the nation is dedicated to the principle of Liberty, Truth and Justice, and Equality, so is the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in the causes it supports, steadfastly pledged to follow a course that will help more fully to achieve, during our lifetime, a realization of these ideals.

"The Aerie homes and club-houses of the Fraternal Order of Eagles are today filling the wants of hundreds of thousands of men.

"During the past year, the building program of our order has been greatly stimulated.

EVENING CLASSES AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

Bookkeeping, typing, Americanization, English for foreigners, and auto mechanics are the courses now offered for adults who are residents of the Jefferson school district at the high school two evenings a week.

Night school is held Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 9 o'clock for the benefit of adults who want to take courses that will aid them in their work, or who want to prepare themselves for a new occupation.

The commercial department is equipped with five different standard makes of machines, so that students may acquire experience on the typewriter of their choice.

Enrollment is open for all these courses now. Persons who have some knowledge of the subject they wish to study may continue their work, while beginners will be given thorough elementary instruction.

DON'T VISIT SCHOOL ONLY TO FIND FAULT

The following article from the pen of Dr. Louis E. Bisch, eminent psychologist, is so full of excellent judgment that it should answer questions in the minds of many parents concerning their relations with school management and their children, for whom they are devoting all their efforts.

In this age, as in all others, there is more or less foolishness connected with education. Popular fads and fancies come and go and through them too much valuable time is lost.

The wise teacher does his best to both comply wtih the fad fancy and never forget to strengthen the young learners in the fundamentals of real knowledge.

Those teachers, not so gifted with discernment, neglect the fundamentals and give nearly all their attention and the valuable time of their pupils to the easier deceiving way.

Occasionally the casual visitor will give less compliment to the wise teacher than to the other, because the latter is able to make a more attractive display. Visitors as a rule are welcomed and serious attention is given to everything they say, be it friendly or otherwise. Should it be complimentary, it makes the teacher's day much pleasanter. The visit should never be very long, as the individuals of the class need the teacher's constant attention, and when the visit is prolonged the patience of the teacher is strained and the even tenor of the room is upset.

All patrons of the school should never sanction the promotion of a child unless there is evidence of a sufficient ability to do the work of the higher grade. Any child permitted to remain in a grade where the work is too hard may be injured for life. The best visit ever made by the father of the writer was to ask the teacher to put his son into a lower grade, where he was put, and in it he was a leader. Ever afterwards he preferred leading to following. It is better to be the head than the tail.

In the article that follows the greatest idea for parents to notice is "Never take the side of the child against the teacher, until after most careful investigation," for most frequently the teacher is not to blame. It would be better, by far, to take the child away from the teacher than to uphold the youthful faultfinding.

Furthermore, no sane teacher will ever take the side of the child, in opposition to its parents, without impartial investigation.

Doing either always results disastrously. Troubles of all descriptions are sure to follow.

Fortunately, very few parents ever dictate to the teachers concerning their children. They seem to know that there is no need of doing so. But, the careful parents often give the teachers information about the children that the teacher should know and frequently a timely suggestion is made, helping at home and at school.

Kindred organizations, like the Parent-Teachers' Association, are helpful when they take an interest in the general management, but when they criticise publicly they invite bitter condemnation.

It is to be hoped that all teachers, trustees, parents and members of school organizations will read and weigh each paragraph of the subjoined article.

W. J. SAVAGE.

Now that the children are again started at school the time is right for impressing upon parents their duty in regards to education.

It is so easy and convenient to wash, dress and feed the little ones, pack them off to school, and then rest content that everything has been done that should be done.

But have you stopped to consider how much good might flow from your own active interest and co-operation with your child's teacher and principal?

Have you ever thought that perhaps the teacher is handicapped, even in the education of your boy or girl, when she seldom, if ever, sees you to discuss the various teaching problems that may arise?

In fact, is it fair to leave everything to the teacher, to push the entire responsibility on to her?

We must remember that, after all, your child is not exactly the same as every other child of her age or of her school class.

All children present certain differences due to heredity, bringing up and environment.

And it is just these differences that may create a problem or handicap your child in educational progress.

Classes and grades and studies are devised to fit the greatest numbers—the average.

No child, however, is absolutely average.

Theoretically, however, each and every child needs special attention of

FIRE COMMISSIONERS IN MONTHLY SESSION

The Fire Commissioners held their regular monthly meeting last Monday evening at the City Hall.

The E. J. Bullard Company had a demonstrator present to demonstrate in inhalator. This machine is very effective when a person has been submerged, overcome by carbon monoxide gas, or any number of other accidents.

A number of Daly City merchants were present to confer with the board on the question of the sale of fireworks. The merchants were requested to meet with the commissioners next Monday evening, February 11, at 7:45 o'clock, at which time they are to have samples of the kinds of fireworks they wish to sell.

The chairman announced that the new laws governing the fire department had been completed, and have been submitted to the board of Councilmen for their approval.

The next meeting of the board will be held on the first Monday evening in March.

MORNING SERVICE AT GRACE CHURCH

The church service at Grace Presbyterian church will be held in the morning next Sunday at 11 o'clock, and the evening service will be omitted for this Sunday, inasmuch as many of the congregation will be attending the Golden Gate Christian Endeavor convention. A number of people have indicated a desire for a morning service. This will give opportunity for them, and all others interested, to attend such a service. The pastor will preach, and the service will close by 12 o'clock, or earlier.

Sunday school as usual, 10 a. m. Junior C. E. at 11:10 a. m.

The Golden Gate Christian Endeavor convention meets at the First United Presbyterian church, corner of Sacramento street and Van Ness avenue, San Francisco, Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and evening, and Sunday afternoon and evening of this week, February 8, 9 and 10. Everyone is invited to attend, even though not a member of the C. E. society.

The Ladies' Aid served a successful luncheon at the church Wednesday noon. A hot meal especially welcome to some of the men who do not enjoy the blessing of a hot dinner ready and waiting for them at home.

VETERAN FIREMEN TO ENJOY BANQUET

The Veteran Firemen of Daly City held their regular monthly meeting on Friday evening of last week, in Company No. 2 fire house, on iVsta Grande avenue. President J. Twesten presided. Mr. L. Lombard, one of the first volunteer firemen of Daly City, was initiated.

The principal business of the evening was making the final arrangements for the banquet to be held at Eagles Hall on this Saturday evening, February 9, at 7:30 o'clock.

President Twesten dwelt at length on the subject of the charter members who had not had their photos taken, to be placed on the charter, the majority claiming that they were camera shy.

After the meeting adjourned the refreshment committee served light refreshments.

APPEAL FOR JELLY AND JAMS

The American Legion Auxiliaries, under the direction of the San Francisco County Council, have just opened their annual jelly drive for the benefit of the veterans at Letterman, Marine, Livermore and Palo Alto hospitals. The drive will continue for one week and donations may be sent to 416 Market street, near Bush, or telephone Sutter 1885, and someone will be glad to call for your contribution.

BOYHOOD PREFERRED INTERESTS LEADERS

The Boy Scouts of San Mateo county need $10,500 to meet their budget for the coming year. This organization, having the support of business leaders in every community throughout the United States, builds character and healthy bodies in growing boys, working by means of the peculiar and lovable traits of boyhood itself. In other words, the "gang instinct," the restlessness, love of the outdoors and the groping mind, ever reaching toward the inspiration of leadership and encouragement—all these are taken into account and turned to usefulness. Rightly understood, these qualities are legitimate and useful. It is only when we allow the "gang instinct" to assert itself undirected that it becomes a menace to the boy and so to the community.

President Coolidge believes in the Boy Scout movement. He has praised it as a builder of good citizenship and of that type of manhood upon which, in the final analysis, every nation must depend for security and prosperity. Mr. Walter W. Head, former president of the American Bankers' Association and now president of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, agrees with this view, while Stewart Edward White, nationally known author and one of the great figures of our generation, who is, by the way, a resident of San Mateo county, has given assurance of his support in the coming drive.

Needless to say, each of these men, and many others, community and national leaders, back their sentiments with their cash.

It was, by the way, a San Mateo county Boy Scout who recently and all unintentionally, "stole the show" when Mr. Head was the guest of the San Francisco district council. Mr. Head is a noted speaker, but after the San Mateo county Boy Scout spoke, the applause from those dignified business leaders was twice that which had been given to the great banker. He bowed in acknowledgment and praised the type of boyhood in San Mateo county, as exemplified in the lad who had been chosen to represent that boyhood. More than 800 boys in the county are enrolled. Their 75 piece band played recently at the Daly City Theatre, and the summer camp activities of the organization, amounting to more than a month each year, are well known.

Facilities of the summer camp need enlargement. More Scout leaders must be trained or some of the growing boys of San Mateo county will be unable to receive the advantages of Scout training.

Mayor Hugh H. Smith, Mr. Arthur Bodine, Mr. R. C. McArthur and Mr. A. L. Stockton are the committee members for Daly City who will conduct the Boy Scout campaign here. Daly City should put over her quota with a bang. She should show San Mateo county that she is not behind in recognition and support of this great character building organization. She should show the world that this city believes in "Boyhood Preferred" and is willing to back that judgment with money. The drive starts February 11. Daly City men and women will welcome an opportunity to "do a good turn" for the Boy Scouts of San Mateo county.

ORGANIZATION PLANS TO SEEK INDUSTRIES

At a meeting of the industrial committes of the combined Chambers of Commerce of San Mateo county, held in San Mateo last Tuesday, a big step forward was taken toward industrial expansion in this county.

During the meeting an organization committee composed of two representatives from each Chamber of Commerce was appointed for the purpose of organizing a San Mateo industrial development conference.

This committee will meet at the offices of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce on Monday, February 11, at 4 o'clock, for the purpose of submitting by-laws and other resolutions for the organizing of this industrial conference.

Judge J. J. McGrath of San Mateo was elected as temporary chairman of the conference, and Roscoe D. Wyatt, secretary of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, was elected temporary secretary.

Emphasizing that co-operation between all the Chambers of Commerce is necessary for the development of industrial San Mateo county, D. A. Raybould, chairman of the industrial committee of the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce, who presided at the meeting, voiced the opinion of some forty members who were present.

Mr. Raybould, in outlining the proposed industrial conference, suggested that this be an organization open to all citizens who think industrially. That the board of governors of this conference be composed of two members from each Chamber of Commerce in San Mateo county, and that the remaining vacancies of the board of governors be filled from the membership at large.

This plan, he explained, would form a representative organization of the entire industrial San Mateo county and would have such combined co-operation and influence that it would function more successfully towards developing industries on the peninsula.

Forecasting San Mateo county's future, Fred Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, in his address laid stress on the importance of industries to San Mateo county, and said, "industrial expansion is a fundamental factor in our economic growth."

Mr. Drake further explained in detail how important the dredging of San Bruno shoals and the efforts to secure this portion as a free port would affect the industrial growth of San Mateo county.

Representatives from each Chamber of Commerce gave a short talk and favored the proposed industrial conference.

Following is the list of the organization committee selected to form he industrial conference: George W. Williams and J. S. James, of Burlingame; P. J. Shaw and Ray Spangler, of South San Francisco; E. T. Harrison and B. Hinman, of Redwood City; J. H. Sullivan and H. A. Harker, of Menlo Park; Fred Mohr and Judge J. J. McGrath, of San Mateo; Claude Sorensen and John Rutherdale, of San Carlos; G. A. Helmore, of San Bruno; Fred Drake and A. J. Parker, of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce.

SUPERVISORS AWARD HIGHWAY CONTRACTS

Contracts for work on two important roadways, the Crystal Springs road and the Memorial Park road, were awarded by the San Mateo county board of supervisors at the regular meeting in Redwood City on Monday.

Frank Bryant, of San Francisco, was awarded the contract for grading the Memorial Park road. His bid was $22,390, the lowest of the eight bids submitted.

Guerin Brothers, San Francisco contractors, submitted the lowest bid for improving the Crystal Springs road. The figure was $6,750. There were fifteen other bids submitted.

One hundred and twenty-eight soft drink permits, both new and renewals, were granted by the board. Ten applications were held up for further investigation and six permits were denied.

County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese read an order from the Superior Court which requested the supervisors to draw up a list of 100 trial jurors.

The board passed a resolution inviting the San Francisco and Santa Clara county boards of supervisors to appoint committees from their boards to cenfer and act with a similar committee from the local board to assist the commercial and civic bodies of the three counties, relative to the request being made of the government to dredge San Bruno shoals, lying east of San Bruno. The proposal includes establishment of a free port on the west shore of San Francisco bay. The resolution was presented by Fred H. Drake, chairman of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the San Francisco and Santa Clara county boards of supervisors.

A. E. Rott, comptroller of Stanford University, in a letter, asked the board to take action on the matter of building a new bridge over San Francisquito creek, on the Stanford-Searsville road, between Menlo Park and Palo Alto. Rott said that if San Mateo county and Santa Clara county will assume the responsibility, Stanford University will advance the money until such time as the two counties could see their way clear to paying for the bridge themselves.

The board pointed out that provision was not made in the budget for the work, and money would not be available until next December. The university is desirous of having a new bridge before the three big football games at the college next fall. The present bridge is said to be in a dangerous condition. The matter was referred to District Attorney Franklin Swart.

County Recorder T. C. Rice asked the board to amend the contract for the building of a balcony in his office to include an additional sum of $50. The request was granted. He was also granted a ten day leave of absence.

WAS LINCOLN A RELIGIOUS MAN?

Whether Abraham Lincoln was or was not a religious man has always been a much debated question. There is considerable information on both sides of this interesting question. It will serve as the theme of the sermon at the Methodist church next Sunday evening. The pastor, Rev. George Woodall, has read a host of books about this ineresting and eminent American and will capably present a study of Lincoln. The sermon will be interspersed with many of the excellent stories about the great emancipator.

ST. MAXIMUS PARISHIONERS TO CELEBRATE ST. PATRICK'S DAY

The Daly City Auditorium has been rented for the annual celebration of St. Patrick's day, which has been an attractive event for the past four years. The program this year promises entertainment of a high order, surpassing even that of last year, which was conceded by everyone present as a huge sucess.

Owing to the fact that Mrch 17 falls on Sunday, the celebration will be held on Saturday evening, March 16th.

Mrs. E. Falvey is chairlady of the weekly whist for this Friday evening. During the season of Lent, which commences on Wednesday, February 13, the regular weekly whists will be discontinued.

BAY TOLL BRIDGE TO OPEN MARCH 2

With but one span left to place, and the work on the approaches, east and west, rapidly nearing completion, directors of the San Francisco Bay Toll Bridge Company have announced that March 2 will probably be the day of formal opening of the big bridge.

it may be justly proud. Were there no other reason for its existence, our order's services in aiding the sick has many times justified its presence on earth. Eagles are furnished, without cost to the individual, the services of a competent physician who may be called at any time of the day or night to minister to the needs of the head of the family, his wife, his children, and any of his dependents. Truly the F. O. E. has saved countless lives since it came into existence in Seattle, Washington, in the year 1898.

"In addition, every Eagle receives, after the first week of his illness, sick benefits sufficient to free him from many of the fears and worries that come when the pay check is cut off.

"And when death, the inexorable, comes, the Eagles always respond—and promptly. From the Aerie funds is taken a reasonable sum to insure the decent burial of a member. 'No Eagle sleeps in Potter's Field' is a statement that can bear the full light of investigation.

"Among other things, there are two matters of record that every Eagle is proud of: First, onr campaigns for Mothers' pensions and pensions for the dependent aged; and second, the many activities of the F. O. E. in the war.

"The Fraternal Order of Eagles is the champion of the old age pension movement. Certainly there is no movement that should make such a stirring appeal to the average man as that which would serve to do away with the worries and fears of penniless and dependent old men and old women. To better this condition is no small problem. Every primary nation on earth today is concerned with its solution. Here in America, the Eagles for six years have been urging a plan whose principles have been accepted in the laws of six states and several Canadian provinces.

"Today as leaders in such legislation are the states of Wisconsin, Montana, Kentucky, Nevada, Colorado, and Maryland, the Territory of Alaska and several provinces in the Dominion of Canada. Governors, in signing old age pension bills have unstintedly given credit to the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

"The second fine patriotic achievement of the Fraternal Order of Eagles is the war record of the order. In 1917-18, out of a membership of only 325,000 Eagles on our roster at that time, 47,000 were in service. The outstanding act of our national convention in 1918 was to create a fund known as the Patriotic Fund. This was to insure a payment of $1,000 to the dependent mother, wife and children of every member of the order who should answer the call of death while in service. Out of this fund there have been paid to date, some 1,300 checks, totaling $1,300,000. This money cannot replace life. But it could, and did, temper the ill-winds of poverty that blew over many a family. These gratuities are still being paid, and we shall continue to pay them. So long as any Eagle, in good standing when he entered the service, loses his life from wounds or illness received in the line of duty, the Patriotic Fund and the Fraternal Order of Eagles will 'carry on.'

"Recently the Grand Aerie, in response to the eager desire of many of its members, created a new department of the order—the Ladies' Auxiliary. The enthusiasm begot may be judged by the fact that during the first four months, more than 2,000 Chapters were instituted, with a membership running into thousands. The motto of the Auxiliaries describes its purpose and its ideal: 'For Home, for Country, and for God.' Is there a nobler motto anywhere?"

some kind in order to fit the child into the regular curriculum.

Your child may be sensitive or unusually shy. It would be better if you told the teacher this yourself than have her discover it.

Your child may be easily discouraged if its mind does not at once grasp the lessons. You can see how knowledge of this sort would aid the teacher materially.

Your child may, perhaps, be precocious, learning at a much faster rate than the average. Any teacher would be glad to give such a child extra or special work to do in order to satisfy its eager intellect.

Teachers sooner or later discover their pupils' peculiarities themselves. But that takes time—valuable time. Meanwhile the child has made a wrong start or is becoming upset and worried because he cannot adjust himself to the classroom routine.

Make it a point to get well acquainted with the teachers of your children.

Don't be afraid that a teacher will not want to be bothered.

Any teacher worth her salt will wlecome your help. The better she understands your child the easier and more effective does her own work become.

Don't go to the teacher only when you have a complaint to register, and be careful you do not side in with your child's criticisms of the teacher until you have first heard what the teacher herself has to say about it.

The earnest teacher is doing more than drawing her salary.

She is definitely assisting your boy or girl and you!

"THE GUARDSMAN" COMING TO GEARY FEBRUARY 11

Directors of the San Francisco Repertory Theatre are anticipating much popular response to their first offering, Lowell Sherman in "The Guardsman," to play an engagement at the Geary Theatre, starting Monday evening, February 11. With the light, zestful touch that Ferenc Molnar, famous Hungarian playright, invariably gives to his comedies, the crisp and engaging dialouge that he puts into the mouths of his characters, this play, which ran for more than one year when produced by the New York Theatre Guild, is expected to prove a sprightly box office lure locally.

In the specially selected cast, rehearsed by Mr. Sherman, with Paul Irving associate director, many of the ablest interpreters of light comedy roles have been secured to support the star.

The story, written in a style typical of Molnar at his best, concerns a Viennese actor and his wife, an actress. The former, to test the loyalty of his spouse, poses as an amorous guardsman and an ample wealth of incident and surprise turns result. Sets of unusual beauty have been designed by Werner Wittkamp, noted continental artist. There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Hearty support of Governor C. C. Young's announced policy of keeping the California highway system out of politics is urged by the board of directors of the California State Automobile Association, in a statement issude this week.

A fine of $500, or 250 days in jail, was the sentence imposed upon R. Jackson, charged with transportation and possession of liquor, by City Recorder Albert Mansfield, in Redwood City. The fine was paid.

Falling in line with a number of civic organizations throughout the state, the San Mateo Chamber of Commerce has officially endorsed the Oddie Colton bill, which would provide for the expenditure of $10,500,000 during the next three years on the building and maintenance of highways across unappropriated public lands, Indian reservations and federal reserves.

At the request of the City Council, the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is mailing out to telephone subscribers in that city a questionnaire asking for the opinion of telephone users on the action recently taken by the Chamber of Commerce, Manufacturers' Association and City Council favoring the inclusion of the industrial district of the city in the San Francisco telephone exchange.

Representative livestock men of the nation gathered in San Francisco on Tuesday for the thirty-second annual convention of the American National Livestock Association. Delegates in attendance represent holdings of more than 33,000,000 head of cattle, valued at more than $1,250,000,000.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Thousands of inquiries have reached the Bureau of Internal Revenue relative to changes in tax legislation. The purpose of the bureau is to answer these questions in a series of newspaper statements, based on the revenue act of 1928, approved May 29, 1928.

The rates of income tax and surtax applicable to individual income, and the personal exemption of individuals and credits for dependents, remain unchanged. The normal tax rate is 1½ per cent of the first $4,000 in excess of personal exemption, credit for dependents, etc., 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on the balance. The surtax rates apply to net income in excess of $10,000. The maximum rate is 20 per cent, which applies to net incomes in excess of $100,000.

The rate of tax on the income of corporations is reduced from 13½ per cent to 12 per cent. The same rate applies to the income of insurance companies, reduction with respect to this class of taxpayers being from 12½ per cent to 12 per cent. The credit allowed a domestic corporation, the net income of which is $25,000 or less, is increased from $2,000 to $3,000.

Paper is now made in more than 10,000 varieties.

BOY SCOUTS BEGIN DRIVE FOR GREATER MEMBERSHIP

The Boy Scout drive for increased membership was opened on Monday night, January 28, when the San Mateo band played before an appreciative audience at the New Daly City Theatre. The boys, ranging from 12 to 17 years of age, played together with perfect coordination, and the selections were received with much acclamation. During the brief time before the band played, Scout John Canestra, of Troop 149, entertained the audience with his harmonica.

It is hoped that at the sight of such a splendid group of boys and at the example of one of the many good points of Scouting which they have attained, that parents will take action in urging their boys to become members of this great organization for boys.

The committee of Troop 149 has done very much to advance Scouting in Daly City. The men who have assisted us so greatly are Councilman Arthur Bodien, Chester K. Smith and Frank Sampson. Just recently Mr. Sampson presented the troop with a photograph album, not an ordinary album, but one that is very costly. These men are doing everything possible to further our plans, which is one of the chief reasons why this troop is so successful.

FANNIE BRICE IN "MY MAN" AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

Fannie Brice, inimitable purveyor of fun, makes her cinema debut in "My Man," which opened at the Embassy Theatre this week. As in the case of Jolson, Ted Lewis, and Sophie Tucker, the vaudeville stage lost the comedienne for a few weeks while she emoted before the camera for this Warner Brothers Vitaphone production. The scenarists built the story of "My Man" around Fannie Brice, her personality, and the song of the same name which she has been singing for six seasons. And into this tale they gave the actress full opportunity to revive her most celebrated songs as well as to introduce a few new numbers.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

ROGUISH EYE TO GO AFTER DERBY

Speedy Youngster Training for Kentucky Classic.

Roaming over the pastures of the breeding farms near Lexington, Ky., are many brood mares which are blind. The progeny of these thoroughbreds, turf history shows, have made enviable records.

One of the greatest race horses that ever went to the post on the American turf was Roamer, whose mother was totally blind. He raced in the East, established several world's records and has a place in the turf hall of fame, writes Paul Hirtenstein in the Chicago Daily News.

Roguish Eye, owned by Ald. John J. Coughlin of Chicago, is also the son of a blind mare. Roguish Eye ran second to Marshall Field's High Strung in the $120,000 Belmont Futurity at Belmont Park racetrack and is being trained for the Kentucky derby next season, which will be run May 18.

Blind mares are not uncommon on breeding farms. With advance age the sight of the animals becomes impaired. Usually one eye goes wrong and in time the other's vision is lost.

Breeders of thoroughbreds love their animals. They would not think of destroying any of the mares which happen to go blind. Special care takers are provided for these afflicted brood mares.

There are scores of race horses blind in one eye at all tracks that compete for honors. Many of the speediest sprinters can see out of only one optic.

With the official announcement that the 1929 Kentucky Derby will be run at Churchill Downs, May 18, there are many eligibles which will be nominated for the $50,000 purse at one mile and a quarter.

Roguish Eye, according to Alderman Coughlin, will be among the nominees. He also intends to send Karl Eitel to the post. Both horses are in their winter quarters at Churchill Downs.

High Strung is among the potential candidates for the Derby. If this Chicago-owned thoroughbred trains on he will, no doubt, be both the winter-book choice and favorite on the day of the big race.

Guy Bush of Cubs Will Always Be "Bush" Leaguer

In one sense of the word, Guy Bush, the Cubs' pitcher with the windmill windup, will always be a "busher." He is one of these fellows who are always worrying over trivial nonessentials. His one big ambition in life is to knock the ball over the left field wall during the batting practice. He would rather accomplish that than win forty games. He'll come up and say, with utter seriousness: "I feel all right. I'm about my right weight. I never felt better in my life, but don't you think my neck is a little too thin? I can't seem to do anything for it."

It's no joke to him, either. He's perfectly serious about it. In fact, he's very serious about everything."

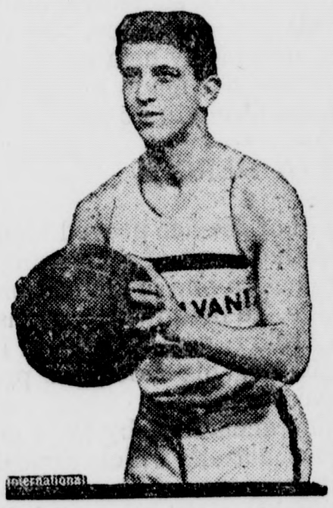
Champion Indians Sign Penner of Texas League

The champion Indians of Indianapolis, closed an important baseball deal in the purchase of Kenneth Penner, star pitcher of the Houston club of the Texas league. He is a right-hander.

Penner, who is thirty years old, has been with the Houston club for three years and last season he had a record of winning twenty games and losing eight. In his three years at Houston he won a total of fifty-seven games, an unusual record in any league.

Previous to joining the Houston club, Penner played with clubs in the Pacific Coast league and the Western league.

Pilot of Cagers



Joe Schaaf of Philadelphia who is captain of the University of Pennsylvania basket ball squad which is in fine shape for the intercollegiate games.

Carried Indicator for Past 25 Years

Bill Klem, veteran National league umpire, has carried a silver ball-and-strike indicator, given to him by John McGraw, in his hand at every game at which he has officiated in the past 25 years.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The bridges on the highways of California if placed end to end would be equivalent of almost 500 miles of paved highway, according to the Highways Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. In other words it would require twelve hours of driving at forty miles per hour to travel over all the bridges in this State.

Chief of Police Quinn issued an ultimatum to the professional gamblers of San Francisco recently telling them to shut up shop or be driven from town. The warning was issued in connection with the fight started a few days ago by Rev. Newton E. Moats, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, against gambling "clubs." The minister, aided by an attorney and a corps of operatives, obtained evidence against a score of places and gave the information to police. Arrests resulted and the cases are pending.

Section of Lake Tahoe as the scene for the winter sports, to be held in connection with the Olympiad in Los Angeles in 1932, will be sought by a joint committee of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce and Sacramento regional council. In connection with the sports program, it is also proposed to hold a dog derby from Tahoe to Yosemite, via the Tioga Pass, and return.

Old sherry wine which before prohibition sold for about $1.25 a gallon wholesale is now selling for three cents a gallon. Or at least 136,146 gallons of such wine were sold by Attorney L. L. Storey, executor of the George Hulme estate, to the Roma Wine Company of Lodi for $5,000. Cory also asked the court to refer the sale to the State Inheritance Tax Appraiser for another appraisal.

The story of how a riotous Fourth of July party in a San Francisco brewery forty-three years ago, and one slight flair of temper twenty-five years later caused Frank Cleichauf, now 70, to spend most of his life in prison, was revealed yesterday when Governor C. C. Young pardoned him. He had killed a taunting fellow reveller.

Establishment of a naval air base on the Pacific Coast has been recommended by Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur. Secretary Wilbur submitted to Congress a draft of a proposed bill to establish such a base at a cost not to exceed $5,000,000 and to appoint a board of naval officers to report on possible locations in all Pacific Coast states. The navy has let contracts for two great airships, the secretary pointed out, and must increase its base facilities or abandon construction of one of the ships. The Navy Department, according to Secretary Wilbur, favors a new base on this coast rather than increasing the east coast facilities. Although the west coast base was proposed informally some months ago, this is the first definite step toward action.

Maddux Airlines takes delivery of two new sixteen passenger tri-motored 1,200 horsepower Ford metal planes and will extend their present San Francisco-Los Angeles service to Phoenix immediately, according to S. A. Stimpson, traffic manager for Northern California. California is certainly forging ahead in the field of aviation. At the present time there are more privately-owned planes in this State than any other in the Union.

Construction of an inn at the Oakland Airport, to cost $40,000 and to contain 37 rooms, has been authorized by the Oakland Port Commission. The hostelry is to be provided to meet the demands of persons traveling by air and those employed at the airport. The establishment of an inn at the airport is in line with the policy of the principal European airports, according to the Port Commission.

Governors of California, Arizona and Nevada are urged to unite in a conference for agreement upon the provisions of the Boulder Dam Act in a concurrent resolution introduced in the Utah House of Representatives by Grant Young, Salt Lake City. The resolution recites that the seven-state ratification of the act is highly desirable and that since spokesmen for the three lower basin States have declared to the Legislature that settlement of their difficulties is possible, a conference should be held without delay. It is suggested it meet in Salt Lake City for the benefit of the members of the Utah Legislature.

After the lapse of nearly a century and a half, a King of Spain is again casting a bell for presentation to Mission Santa Clara. Word has been received by Father Cornelius J. McCoy, president of the University of Santa Clara, that King Alphonsus of Spain has ordered a new bell cast for the mission to replace the bell destroyed in 1926 when fire razed the historic structure. The monarch is having the new bell cast in the royal shops of the artillery, and a suitable inscription is being composed for it by the professor of rhetoric at Veruela, according to a letter from the Duke of Miranda, majordomo to the King.

Recommendation that the State of California be reimbursed in the sum of $4,370,000 for funds contributed to flood control in the Sacramento River, was turned down by the United States Senate appropriations committee.

Chinese laundry workers of San Francisco want to make whoopee on Saturday night. More than 500 of them are on strike for a shorter working day on Saturday. Chinese laundry workers of the other bay cities have Saturday nights off, they say. The strike started recently when the workers deserted the suds and marched to their headquarters.

A SCHOOL PROBLEM

Earnest educators throughout the United States are giving serious thought to a reform of curricula, with a view of better adapting them to the needs of the present-day student. No current question deserves more thoughtful consideration.

It is no reflection upon our educational leaders that present methods are proving inadequate to the demands of the times. With the ever-increasing store of available knowledge, it becomes more and more difficult to choose that which should be taught in the limited time that can be given to formal education by the average student.

But the problem is not new. As far back as 1758 the prevailing system of education in England came in for drastic criticism by Thomas Sheridan, who labored with little success for its reform.

Sheridan contended that the established system of that day did not fit the young for their duties in life; that it was uniform for all and profitable for none. He also stressed the importance of imparting a better knowledge of the English language.

The latter point, at least, might well be taken to heart today. It would be a great step forward if our children might emerge from high school with a reasonable acquaintance with their mother tongue.

CELLAR FIRES LEAD LIST

Out of one hundred alarms answered by the New York Fire Department last year, fifty-three were located in cellars and originated in piles of rubbish.

Fire statistice prepared by the National Board of Fire Underwriters show that rubbish and litter cause a fire loss to the nation of over one and a half million dollors annually. This is entirely preventable, as it is apparent that if ordinary rules in regard to preventing accumulations of litter were followed, there would be no such fires. With the total annual fire loss of the nation amounting to approximately half a billion dollars, every effort should be made to curtail this most easily prevented fire waste. What is needed is a continuous clean-up campaign to prevent accumulations of rubbish, and it would seem that it should not be a difficult matter to reduce the amount of fire loss charged to this cause every year.

BEST BELOVED CITIZEN

If someone were to promote a competition to determine the best loved citizen of the United States, we should not hesitate to nominate for that distinction Walter Damrosch, 67 years old on January 30.

And if the school children of the country were permitted to vote, his majority would be overwhelming, and increase from week to week. For through his educational orchestral concerts over the radio for school children he is endearing himself to the young generation as no human being has ever done before him. Each Friday millions of children and others listen to these concerts by a symphony orchestra, enjoying not only the music, but also the explanations so simply and charmingly given by Mr. Damrosch in person.

Although he has been known throughout the civilized world as America's premier orchestra conductor for many years, it is only since the advent of the radio that an intimate appreciation of his consummate artistry and delightful personality has been extended to the masses of the people, particularly to the children.

On his sixty-seventh birthday, Mr. Damrosch may look back over a long period of service in the Temple of Music, of which his present radio undertaking is perhaps the crowning achievement. May he long continue so to serve—a veritable high-priest of culture and kindliness.

LITERARY PIRACY

Following the lead of our American "debunkers," perhaps, literary critics are unearthing what they claim to be monumental frauds perpetrated by authors of supposed imperishable fame.

For example, it is now claimed, with much show of plausibility, that Dumas stole the plot of "The Three Musketeers" from a book by one Courtil de Sandras, published in 1701. Also that many other novels by the famous French mulatto were taken from books a few centuries old, which Dumas "jazzed up" and published as his own.

Another alleged discovery is that John Bunyan "cribbed" the essentials of his "Pilgrim's Progress" from a story by Guileville, a Frenchman who lived three centuries before Bunyan. Then, again, it is asserted that Parson Weems filched the story of Washington's hatchet and cherry tree from a story much older, which pertained to an entirely different person. It is quite generally accepted among scholars that the cherry tree story is a myth, regardless of its original source.

And lest we be charged with piracy ourselves, let us hasten to say that the above information is condensed from a recent article in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, as quoted in the Literary Digest.

MAYOR'S FUTILE JOKE

An amusing twist was given to a municipal campaign in Vancouver, B. C., recently, when the re-election of Mayor L. D. Taylor was opposed by all the newspapers in the city.

Some time previous to the campaign, Mr. Taylor had been apparently at the point of death, so the newspapers had prepared highly commendatory editorials for publication when he should shuffle off, and had them set in type. The mayor got well and the type was discarded, but proofs had been struck, and somehow he got hold of them.

At the height of the campaign he read the laudatory editorials to a large audience, much to the amusement of the public and the discomfiture of the editors.

But the newspapers had their revenge. The mayor was defeated in the election.

SECRETARY WEST WINS OUT

After several days wasted in debate at the instance of a few members, the United States Senate confirmed by an overwhelming vote the nomination of Roy O. West to be Secretary of the Interior, just as everyone knew it would. Objection was made to Mr. West by certain professional corporation-baiters, because he had held some stock in a public utility enterprise, of which he promptly divested himself upon being appointed to the cabinet.

According to those of certain tendencies, no man who has ever been engaged in any useful or successful activity in the business world is eligible for high office. To their minds, a successful man must necessarily be a crook.

But fortunately this idea has not made much headway in this country, and it is not likely to do so.

PRESIDENT A HERO

President Emilio Portes Gil of Mexico proved himself a real hero a few days ago, as the result of embracing an opportunity such as seldom comes to one in his station of life. Walking alone near a lake, he heard the screams of Mrs. Pedro Lagma, wife of a broker, who had fallen into the water. Without even removing his shoes, the president leaped in and swam to shore with her.

Needless to say, he is being acclaimed by the people for his prompt and courageous action, which appealed with unusual force to the Latin temperament.

Already highly esteemed by his countrymen, this life-saving exploit gave his tremendously added prestige, which may be of great advantage during his administration. Viva la Presidente!

A recent article enumerating those who have contributed to the emancipation of women failed to mention Mr. Sholes, or whoever it was who invented the typewriter.

It is said that the Chinese are learning to like tomatoes and asparagus. But it will probably take a good deal of missionary work to convert them to spinach.

Recently a Palistine weekly published a fictional story relating that the mummy of King Solomon's "favorite" wife had been unearthed. Jerusalem newspapers and press correspondents took the yarn seriousiy and spread the report as real news, but which they later had to admit was a hoax. On its face the tale would seem fishy, for with 700 wives to choose from it is doubtful that even Solomon in all his wisdom could have picked out one special favorite.

An ordinance prohibiting unnecessary noises has been passed by the city council of Havana, Cuba, hitherto considered one of the noisiest cities in the world. He is deaf.

One of the foremost questions of the day is, "How permanent will be the present color vogue?" If history be any indication, color has come to stay for many years. The color fashion which has so completely swept the world is not a whim of a passing moment. Previous color periods have endured for great lengths of time, and the present color age promises to go down as the most remarkable color period of all.

Particularly in home decoration will the influence of color be felt—and for long. Already an airplane view of city and countryside presents to the eye home exteriors of alluring beauty, and as variegated as the tints of sunset itself. A peep into these same homes discloses decorative schemes and beauty of color hitherto unknown. The age of color is truly here to stay.

In keeping with this new color trend the Acme White Lead and Color Works of Detroit, Michigan, has originated many advanced colors of pronounced beauty and durability. In addition, this company has prepared a remarkable book on home decoration, "King Color Rules the Home," by Dr. C. D. Holley and his associates of Acme research division, in collaboration with Miss Nancy McClelland, national authority on interior decoration. This book may be secured through Acme dealers who are known as "The House of Color" in their respective communities.

Color has indeed come to brighten a sad world. People are more color wise and color alert than ever before. To know one's colors is to be abreast of the times. And to be able to select colors that are as durable as they are beautiful is the accepted rule of the multitude today just as it was the guarded exception of the color specialist of yesterday.

The Selmi Hardware Company, Acme dealers, are known in this community as "The House of Color," and will gladly enable those interested in home decoration to secure a copy of this book which is considered the last word on this important subject.

GREASE-PROOF MONEY

It is well known that the automobile has caused many new problems to arise, but one that the average person might not think of is that of greasy paper money. And grease is a great enemy of the old-fashioned kind of paper money, because it causes it to wear out very rapidly.

So serious did the problem of wear and tear on currency become that the goverment set about to find a grease resistant kind of paper, and one that would have better general wearing qualities. For in recent years the life of a paper bill has averaged only about two months. This meant the making of about 1,200 tons of new currency each year.

As a result of research, a new paper has been developed which will last about three times as long as the former kind, while the reduction in the size of the new bills, which will be issued this year, will make possible still further economies in the production of the country's paper money.

At first only one-dollar bills will be made in the new size, which is one-third smaller than the old, but eventually bills of other denominations will be made in the reduced size. It is estimated that it will take about five years to replace all old currency with new.

Valuable acids are now being extracted from sawdust.

BIG DEVELOPMENT OF TELEPHONES IN OREGON

Twenty-five years ago there was an average of only about 84,000 daily telephone conversations in the state of Oregon and only 21,000 telephones. Today there are almost 1,000,000 telephone conversations a day and more than 180,000 telephones. In other words the number of calls now equals at least one a day for every man, woman and child in the state.

Also, twenty-five years ago the number of long distance calls out of the state was virtually negligible, but today they average about 15,000 and go to all points of the country, as well as to European countries.

In the last quarter of a century, the number of daily telephone conversations in the state has increased 1,100 per cent and the number of telephones about 800 per cent.

The RED LAMP

THE STORY

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. With their niece, Edith, the Porters go to Twin Hollows for their vacation, despite Jane's reluctance. A letter Horace had been writing at the time of his death shows that he was interested in spiritualism. It hints of danger. A "red lamp" is mentioned. They take up their residence in the lodge, because of Jane's aversion to the house. Warren Halliday, in love with Edith, comes to live in the boathouse. A number of sheep are mysteriously killed in the vicinity. The slayer leaves a cabalistic sign at the scene of the killings. Greenough, a detective, arrives and Porter has a feeling that he is under suspicion. Twin Hollows is rented to an elderly, partially paralyzed man, Bethel, who, with his secretary, Gordon, takes possession. A youth, Carroway, on watch for the sheep killer, disappears. Porter has the red lamp hidden in a room of which he alone has the key, but many people, including the professor himself, believe they have seen its reflection at Twin Hollows. Halliday is mysteriously attacked and seriously injured. Carroway is found in the bay, murdered. Mary Morrison, Porter's cook, disappears. Gordon, Bethel's secretary, is found unconscious from a blow on the head.

Thomas, however, who seems to have his own methods of acquiring information, today tells a fact which, in my ignorance of such matters, I had not noticed last night. He states that the doctor reports the boy as having been tied in the same manner as poor Carroway; in two half-hitches around the wrists, a turn or two about the body and arms, and ending in two half-hitches at the ankle.

The rope, it appears, was not brought for the purpose, but had been left lying on the top of Annie Cochran's laundry basket in the kitchen, when she went home last night.

Later: Greenough and Doctor Hayward have driven past, on their way to the main house. I have telephoned to Halliday, and he is on his way here. I may need him.

July 28.

After all, things passed off yesterday better than I had hoped. The detective concedes that, while in daylight it is a simple matter to reach the main house from the sun-dial, it is not an easy one at night. And I think he was puzzled when I said:

"After all, the real mystery to me is how Doctor Hayward, who says he was passing on the main road in his car, could reach the house so soon after I did."

"He had his car."

"But he didn't drive in. You left it outside the Lodge gates, doctor, didn't you?"

"I didn't know just where the bell was ringing."

"But you knew there was such a bell on the main house. Every one around here knows it. Even at that, you made very good time. I had only had time to light one match and see the boy, when you turned your flashlight on me."

I imagine, and Halliday agrees with me, that whatever Greenough had in mind when he came, the new element thus introduced caused him to hesitate. And to add to his hesitation, the doctor, from the breezy unctuousness of his entrance, took to twitching and gnawing his finger tips.

"I don't suppose you are intimating that I knocked the boy down, Porter," he said, "but it sounds like it. As a matter of fact, I didn't even know him; never saw him, to my knowledge, until last night."

"I'm not intimating anything. I'm in a peculiar position; that's all. And you have been considerably more than intimating that I was where I had no business to be last night. I had, you see, exactly as much reason to be there as you had. Rather more, I imagine."

I was perhaps a trifle excited, but heaven knows I had a right to be.

"I know what you have in your mind, Mr. Greenough, and I'm glad to have this chance to lay my cards on the table. Ask my wife why I was on the float, the night Carroway was killed in the bay. "She'll tell you I was in bed, until she roused me and sent me down to the beach. Ask Peter Geiss where I was at the hour when Halliday was attacked; he can tell you. Ask the newspaper reporter who told me, right here, about that culvert under the road where Halliday's car overturned; and ask Halliday himself about our excursion to examine it, and my losing my fountain pen there. And then ask yourself if I would open the gun-room window of the main house to make an entrance when I have in this desk a key to every door in the place."

Greenough smiled dryly.

"That's a pretty strong defense, considering that you haven't been accused," he said. "As a matter of fact, we hadn't found your fountain pen, Mr. Porter. I'm afraid we overlooked something there!" . . .

Since they have gone, I feel, although he has not said so, that Halliday believes I have made a tactical error. Nevertheless, I feel a great sense of relief. I have at least made a hole in that web of circumstantial evidence which has seemed to be closing around me, and sent the detective scurrying back to the center of it again, to spin such new threads as he is able.

July 29.

Today has been quiet. Those constant reminders of the latest tragedy, the boats dragging the bay, have disappeared, and once more we see gay little picnic parties chugging across the water to Robinson's point or thereabouts, laden with hampers and, I dare say, with flasks.

Jane and I took a brief walk this afternoon, and noticed a man clearing the woods on Nylie's farm, across the road. We stopped and watched him for a time, and he seemed curiously inexpert at the job. But perhaps I am too ready to suspect Greenough's fine hand in everything I see.

Young Gordon, although still confined to his room, is up and about again.

Today I asked Hayward, who had been to see him, if I might visit him, but he shook his head.

"He is still in an excitable condition," he said. "Better give him a day or two more."

As, however, Annie Cochran reports him in excellent shape, although moody and irritable, I can only feel that the doctor has his own reasons for keeping me away from him. At the same time, I must be careful not to allow suspicion to carry me too far. Mr. Bethel states flatly that the boy has no idea of who attacked him and himself suggests Thomas! . . .

My talk with Mr. Bethel last night was interesting and not without an unusual quality of its own. He chose to be civil, and rather more than that I felt that the alarm of my entrance over, he not only greeted me with a sense of relief, but kept me as long as possible. My last impression of him is of a helpless and yet indefinably militant figure in a dimly lighted room, sitting upright in its chair, one withered hand palm upward, on his knee, and the other not too far from a revolver. . . .

I am puzzled over that picture, as I am over the one which I saw from the terrace window, as I approached. He gave the same impression then as he did when I left, of a man sitting waiting for something.

As I looked in at him, he was facing toward the hall and the dining-room door, directly across, with a concentration so great that my light tap at first did not reach his ears. And during the entire conversation which followed, every now and again I was conscious of a sudden abstraction on his part, an intent listening, that made me nervous in spite of myself.

I gather that, like young Gordon, he has heard certain sounds in the house at night, but does not intend to be stampeded by them, to use his own words. He has some theory of a disturbance of molecular activity, by some undiscovered natural law, which I could not follow closely. But in the discussion of superstition in general which followed, I was a trifle disconcerted to find him laying much of it to the Christian religion; that our present theology had given birth to the widespread belief in evil spirits and in sorcery.

Strangely enough, I had at that moment one of those curious sensations which I have heard referred to as a failure of the two sides of the brain to synchronize.

I had the feeling that sometime, somewhere, eons ago, I had sat in a dimly lighted room and heard those same words. And that I had had the same instinctive revolt from them.

But the impression was fleeting, and seeing perhaps that our views did not coincide, he added that I must not believe that he disregarded the spiritual side of the individual, or of the universe.

"Soul animating matter!" he said. "It is a great thought, Mr. Porter. And I have reached that time in life when what is to come is assuming more importance than that which has gone."

Then he dismissed the subject, and went back again to the local situation, this time taking up the crimes themselves. He sees no necessary connection between the disappearance of Maggie Morrison and the tragedy of Carroway, on this I did not enlighten him.

As to the strange affair of the attack on Gordon, he himself with Annie Cochran's assistance, examined the gun room the next morning. The lock of the window was broken, but he fancied that was a matter of old standing. He was having it repaired.

"The boy's story seems to be borne out by the facts," he said. "There were indications, as you probably know, that some one had entered by the window. But what strikes me as strange is that whoever did so should have known his way so well. Gordon says no light was turned on, yet this fellow puts his hand on the only weapon about, the poker, without difficulty." He turned and glanced at me. "How long have you known Thomas, the gardener?" he asked.

"Too long to think he would do a thing like that," I said, rather warmly.

"I dare say. And, although I think Thomas is not fond of Gordon, that would be carrying a distaste rather far, I imagine."

He has no anxiety for himself, or at least so he said; I am personally not so certain. For as I looked back from the terrace on my way out, he was once more facing toward the hall, and—I somehow felt—watching it.

July 30.

I have today borrowed some of Mrs. Livingstone's books on psychic research, and intend to go into them thoroughly. If there is any proof in a mass of evidence, it is certainly here.

On the other hand, one must remember that the hope of survival is the strongest desire of the human heart. How many, if they felt that this life was all, would care to go on with it?

Analyzing my last night's experience, however, I can find nothing in my mind before I went to sleep, to account for it. I ate a light dinner, and spent the evening after Jane retired with this Journal. The night was quiet, and my last waking thought was concerning the wood-cutter across the road, who seems so singularly inactive except when some one leaves the Lodge, or appears at one of its windows.

One thing I have traced, however. It is distinctly possible that the herbal, aromatic odor I noticed at the end of the experience was due to the leaves he collected yesterday, and which I find have smoldered throughout the night. . . .

It was after midnight when, just as I was dozing off, Jane came to my door and asked me if I would mind sleeping in her room.

Today He Took Me to See It.

"I can fix you a bed on the couch," she said, avoiding my eyes. "I'm nervous tonight, for some reason."

I went at once, trailing my bedding with me, and while she prepared the couch I observed her. She was very white, and I saw that her hands were shaking, but she refused my offer of some brandy with her usual evasive answer.

"I'm all right," she said. "I just don't like being alone."

She fell asleep almost at once, like one exhausted, but the change of beds had fully roused me, and I lay for some time staring into the darkness. I do not know when it was that I began to have the feeling that we were not alone in the room, but I imagine fully half an hour had passed.

I saw nothing, but I had the sensation of being stealthily watched, and with it something of horror rather than of fear. I was rigid with it. Then something seemed to tug at my coverings, and the next moment they had slid to the floor. Almost immediately after that there came a rush of air through the room, a curtain billowed over my face, and the door into the hall swung open. Then all was silent, save for a low whine from Jock, outside in the hall.

How much of this today to allot to my nerves I do not know. Undoubtedly Jane's nervousness had affected me; equally undoubtedly bed clothing has a tendency to slip from a couch. I have experimented today. A gale of wind would blow out a curtain and open an unlatched door.

On the other hand, I am as certain today as I have been certain of anything recently, that I had bolted the door when I entered the room. But it was not bolted in the morning.

If I have indeed actually had a psychic experience, it seems singularly purposeless. Up to this time I have imagined, correctly or not, that these inexplicable occurrences have had a concealed but definite objective, if such a phrase may be used. But in this case there is apparently nothing.

We have had, however, a development of our own, and this from Edith!

It appears that this morning, seeing Doctor Hayward pass on his round of morning calls, she went to his office and, on his housekeeper reporting him out, asked permission to go into his office and there leave him a note.

"A note?" I inquired. "What sort of a note?"

"Any sort of note," said Edith. "As it happens, I asked him to tea tomorrow. It was all I could think of."

But what she really did was to type a few lines on his typewriter, tear the paper out and put it in the small vanity case which is as much a part of her as the nose she powders from it.

(As a net result of which audacious performance Halliday now informs me that the cipher words were not written on the doctor's machine.)

A careful comparison under a magnifying glass shows this so that even I can recognize it. So there we are again.

July 31.

Halliday has found the boat.

At least he has found a boat which answers Jane's description. Today he took me to see it.

It lies in the small creek which extends through the marsh half a mile north of the boathouse, and just beyond Robinson's point.

The boat, evidently an old and abandoned one, gives some evidence of recent use. That is, although it contains some water, there is very little, whereas, as Halliday says, after the recent rains it might well be full.

The oarlocks are wrapped with dingy white cotton cloth, and to prevent their being stolen, or the boat taken away, the oars had been skillfully hidden in the marsh. Halliday located them but left them as they were; but with his penknife he cut away a small bit of the muffling on the oarlock, for later possible identification.

It was in this boat, Halliday believes, that the murderer fled onto the bay from our slip the night Carroway discovered him, and from it too that he later climbed into Carroway's launch and attacked him.

Small wonder, that the boy's face set hard as he examined it.

Yet, for one must find some humor nowadays or go mad, there was something humorous in the careful indirection by which we reached it. We made rather ostentatious preparations to go fishing, Halliday working with hooks and sinkers, and I hopelessly entangled in coils of line.

Later, we rowed across the bay and anchored by the whistle buoy, where we fished assiduously for some time. Our approach to the mouth of the creek was therefore of a most desultory sort, but once around Robinson's point, we abandoned caution and rowed rapidly.

Had Greenough been able to see us, from start to finish, he would have had some basis for his suspicions of me.

Whether Halliday's later discovery has any significance or not we are not certain. Believing that, on the night of the girl's murder she was brought in the truck to the water front, and coupling this with the finding of the boat, he left me sheltered from observation in the woodland and started through it toward the main road.

In a half hour or so he came back again, and reported that he had found the track of wheels driven through the woods, and that in one place a barbed wire fence had been taken down and boards placed over it, to permit the passage of a car across it.

This is, I imagine, fair presumptive evidence, although it brings us no nearer the identity of the criminal than we were before. One thing, however, may be valuable. Edith, who knows a number of unsuspected housewifely things, insists that the strips which wrapped the oarlocks are of a fine grade of material.

"Look for somebody," she says, "who uses linen sheets on his bed, and doesn't care that they cost twenty-five dollars a pair nowadays."

From which I gather, among other things, that our little Edith has been pricing the equipment of a home.

Tonight that old sea-chest which in the boathouse holds on its top the law books which were to occupy Halliday's leisure this summer, and which so far seem to be used chiefly to hold open his doors on windy days—the old sea-chest contains to date the four clews which are our sole ammunition in the putative expedition against Greenough. They are:

(a) Half of a broken lens from a pair of eye-glasses.

(b) A scrap of paper, containing a cryptic bit of typing in large and small letters.

(c) The small cap of an ether can.

(d) A fragment of white cloth.

Had it not been for Halliday's unwittingly placing a weapon in the enemy's hands we should also have had:

(e) A very sharp knife, with a plain wooden handle and a blade approximately six inches long.

August 1.

An incendiary fire was started beneath the boathouse last night, or rather toward morning. An assortment of what was apparently oil-soaked waste was placed in one of the pails from the sloop, and a candle lighted and placed in it. Over this was laid such lumber as was left from the repair of the pier.

Had Halliday been asleep the entire building might have burned. As it happened, he had been in the woods near where we found the boat, on a chance that its proprietor might pay it a visit. He discovered the fire from some distance and by hard running, reached it in time to extinguish it.

He notified Greenough early this morning, but the gentleman was extremely noncommittal. He stood with his hands in his pockets, kicking over the ashes of the fire.

"What's the big idea, Mr. Halliday?" he inquired.

"I don't get that," said Halliday, belligerently.

"Don't you?" said Greenough, and after kicking the ashes once more, took an unruffled departure.

The best we can make of that is that the detective believes the whole thing a clumsy but concerted plan, on Halliday's part and mine; that we have endeavored to show that, although his watchers would be able to testify that I had not left the house last night, the unknown is still at work.

Nor can I entirely blame him for that. Whoever built the fire knew that Halliday was out at the time. But Halliday could not so state without betraying his knowledge of the boat, a matter he wishes to keep to himself as long as possible.

A new month begins today, and like Pepys, it behooves me to take stock of myself. In spite of my best endeavors, some of my anxiety has crept into this record during the last month; and not always anxiety for myself. Alone, I could take off my coat and fight this thing out, but I am handicapped by Edith and Jane.

Edith will not go and leave Halliday; June will not consider abandoning me here, although she has no idea of the true situation.

I have, I feel, a responsibility I can not evade. The responsibility to my tenant. I have, by a reduced rent and an alluring advertisement, brought here an elderly paralytic and his young secretary. And, evade the issue as I may, the fact remains that the last two acts of violence have been on my property. From the beginning, indeed, the most casual survey of the situation shows me that Twin Hollows has been a sort of focal point. It was on this property that Nylie saw the sheep-killer hunt sanctuary; not on it, but adjacent to it, is still hidden the boat, and it was from my own float that he first escaped from Carroway and later killed him; it was even very possibly his flashlight that Halliday saw, the night of his arrival when, finding the boathouse occupied, he worked his way through the salt marsh toward the sea.

More recently the radius of his activity has been narrowed to the property itself. The secretary sees him outside a window; he enters the house and attacks him from within. And a few days later, possibly having overseen Halliday's discovery of his boat, he attempts to drive him away by setting fire to the boathouse. . . .

I am tempted to ask Mr. Bethel to cancel his lease; to return him his money, entire, and relieve me of responsibility.

What would he say, I wonder?

August 2.

I have been reading Mrs. Livingstone's books, and a pretty lot of nonsense I find them. If there is anything in this question of survival, surely we cannot expect to find it in physical phenomena. Why not better accept that the nervous force which actuates the body may, in certain individuals, extend beyond the periphery of that body?

Nevertheless, it is as well that I brought away from the other house the book I found there on the desk, on "Eugenia Riggs and the Oakville Phenomena." It is no reading for Mr. Bethel, under the circumstances.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Shining Example of Art "Made to Order"

A painter in Raphael's or Rubens' time, must have been a singularly inartistic person, judged by modern standards. He generally began his career as an apprentice, grinding colors and stretching canvases or preparing panels for some eminent employer. Later, he was allowed to work on the less important portions of his master's works, and still later, he opened a studio of his own. But he didn't call it a studio. It was a shop, equipped to turn out art by the piece or on time. Its proprietor was ready and willing to furnish whatever was wanted, from a sign for another shop to the ceiling of a chapel. His main concern was to please his customers, make as much money as possible, and turn out a good job. And because self-expression, in its only true sense, is almost as involuntary a process as the growth of a man's hair or the coloring of his eyes, he managed, in the course of a busy life, to stamp his work with an individuality before which we still stand in admiration. Haydn ground out over a hundred symphonies because his chief job, under Prince Esterhazy, was to furnish symphonies; Bach wrote his church cantatas because he would have lost his job if he hadn't. Mozart wrote his Requiem mass because a customer came along who wanted one. Shakespeare wrote his plays because the stock company he was working for needed things to act.—Vanity Fair Magazine.

No Presswork Necessary

The cowboy had just discovered waffles and he had his appetite with him. The first order disappeared in record time and another supply was called for. Order after order followed, but the waffles did not come quite fast enough for the cowboy, so he said to the waiter: "Tell the feller out there he needn't stop to put the printin' on them; jest send 'em in plain."

Masculine Preferred

If ever it was deemed a handicap to have been born a girl, that can no longer be the attitude of mind of any one who sees how wide open to women are all the doors of opportunity. But a Portland (Maine) boy must still be of the opinion that he was in luck to have been born of the masculine gender. Recently in Sunday school the subject of regeneration was being discussed. When told that it meant to be born again, he made it clear that he was not in favor of it. When asked his reason, he said:

"How do I know that if I was to be born again I wouldn't be a girl?"

A wife never hates to ask her husband for money any less than he hates to have her do it.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Damp Plate

"Waiter, this plate is quite damp."

"Pardon me, sir, that is your soup."

—Lustige Kolner Zeitung.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Frog's Privilege

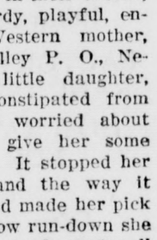
Hewitt—"The frog would awooing go." Jewett—"Why not? It is always leap year for the frog."

A boy would rather the family ran out of soap than of molasses.

"Gave Up Hope of Life!"

Says Mrs. Robb:

(She Feels Much Better Now)



"I WAS so weak—couldn't sleep nor eat—couldn't digest anything—I was a complete wreck." [Many of us know the meaning of such suffering.] "I feel better now than I did at 16—never took anything but PE-RU-NA; I now eat everything—no matter what it is." [You can imagine Mrs. Robb's joy at PE-RU-NA'S wonderful relief.] "You don't have to have faith in PE-RU-NA—if you will take it, it will surely relieve." [Signed: Mrs. Sally Robb, Hawesville, Ky.] [And it's true! PE-RU-NA does its work surely, quickly and effectively. There is every reason in the world why you should have it in your home—get it from any drug store today.]

YOUR BANK AND HOW TO USE IT

Savings and Commercial Department

The banking establishment comes into the life of the average man first of all through his desire to save. Therefore, the process of opening a savings or commercial account is usually his first contact with the bank.

All too often it is his only contact. Ordinarily the idea of protecting his savings for the benefit of his loved ones or his business, should be tantamount to the idea of building up a savings account. The savings should be backed up by the powerful and all-inclusive service of the Trust Department if they are to be 100 per cent effective. They are absolutely safe and secure in any event, but trust service keeps them functioning normally in the depositor's behalf throughout the emergencies of accident and death and other contingencies that might affect them were it not for such service.

The savings account transaction is perhaps the simplest of the banking contracts. Upon opening such an account, the customer is first asked if he wishes to deposit currency or checks. If checks, it is necessary to furnish proper identification.

He then signs a signature card on which he also notes his address, occupation, name of father and mother, whether he is married or single, birthplace and date of birth and the name of his nearest surviving heir. These questions are for identification purposes only. In other words, they enable the bank to honor his withdrawals in the event that he meets with an accident and is unable to sign his name. Through this information he is also protected in the event that he loses his passbook and it should fall into other hands.

In joint savings accounts, where both parties are empowered to draw, each must sign a "joint tenant" signature card, attesting an equal right to the account. The same information is required from each as would be required from a single depositor.

In applying for a commercial account the depositor is asked to sign a signature crad on which he also notes the nature of his business and the name of the firm or individual by whom he is employed. Usually a reference from another bank is reaquired unless the prospective client has been introduced by a present depositor or employe of the bank. This means of identification enables the bank to become better acquainted with the depositor in the event that he might wish to esablish credit.

In opening an account for a firm owned by an individual or co-partnership, the depositor must give the information that is required for a personal account and must also satisfy the bank as to the actual ownership of the firm. Every partner in a co-partnership must sign the signature card, as must every sole owner of a firm. The depositor must be either the sole owner or one of the partners.

A corporation desiring to open either a commercial or savings account must furnish the bank a certified copy of resolutions designating the bank as its depositary. These resolutions also must embody all instructions as to the depositing and withdrawal of funds in the account and must give the names of those authorized to draw on such funds.

When a depositor wishes to give a power of attorney to someone to draw funds against his account, it is necessary that he sign a power of attorney card furnished by the bank. The person holding the power of attorney must sign the card also. This is attached to the depositor's card and placed in the files. The power of attorney is effective until revoked in writing by the depositor or made inoperative by the death of the depositor.

There are many developments of the savings function, most of which are described in the present series. All of these developments are designed to save money for the depositor. A bank has nothing to sell but service. Every phase, feature and type of service that it sells must yield a definite return to the depositor or other customer, either in money or in opportunities whereby money may be saved.

FARM TELEPHONES

At the beginning of 1928 approximately 2,600,000 telephones were located on farms in the United States, an increase of about 100,000 in eight years, despite the fact that in the same period the number of farms in the country has decreased by upwards of 100,000. It is estimated that approximately 14 per cent of the telephones in the country are located on farms.

It is estimated that during 1928 the telephone companies comprising the Bell system will spend an average of more than $800 per minute for new construction and for replacement of existing plants.

OPERATOR WILL NOW GIVE YOU THE CORRECT TIME

"What is the time?"

The old cry of the man who forgot to wind his clock last night, or has none to wind, will find an answer if he has a telephone.

Announcement was made last Friday by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company that in future it will give the time of day to all who ask.

In order to learn the time of day, it is only necessary to lift the receiver from the hook and call the operator, or in offices with dial telephones, to dial operator.

"This time giving is in accordance with our policy of continuously improving and broadening our service," announces an official of the telephone company. "It has been our desire to render this service, but the rapid growth of other demands on telephone facilities has made it impractical. We are now equipped to go ahead with it, and it is with pleasure that we make this announcement to all our customers."

SAFEGUARDING SAVINGS

Many dollars and many regrets would be saved yearly if investors would seek competent advice before hazarding hard earned savings. "Ask your banker or any good broker" is always a proper first move.

The investor generally does not wish to take chances. The banker is familiar with investment pitfalls. We sometimes think him too conservative. But he can help you select a gilt-edge bond or he can put you in touch with a long established investment house that he knows to be reputable and who will gladly give you expert advice.

Perhaps you have the urge of this much-headlined speculative wave. If so, hurry to that same banker faster than ever, before some shrewd stock salesman or promoter has that itching money placed on a "sure shot." Your banker will refer you to a good brokerage house that is a member of one or more of our great city stock exchanges and again you will gladly be given expert advice and explanation in selecting either a stable or speculative listed stock.

A careful check up of the people you are doing business with is the greatest single factor in the successful investment of savings, and no doubt much more important than the average person's attempt to sum up the merit of a specific security.

Most of us common mortals cannot see into the usual financial statement much farther than we can see through the cast iron in a new automobile's motor when we lift its shining hood.

Ben Williams, shoemaker of Tahiequah, Okla., must have gotten hold of a potent brand of hooch, if a press report is true. He came to after his spree, bloody and in jail. Officers said he had killed a deer with his pen knife. Williams said all he remembered was that he "had a fight with something."

Sometimes a man needs all his will power to match against his wife's won't power.

Protecting others at risk to themselves is all in the day's work for policemen, but a rather unusual case of self-sacrifice was that of Special Officer F. A. McLaughlin of New York. His job was watching for pickpockets in the subway. While engrossed in that duty his own wallet containing $80 was stolen from his pocket.

F. S. Neswitz of Washington appears to be a rather poor sport. Last fall he married a girl as a result of losing a bet on a football game, and now he wants the marriage annulled on the ground that a gambling debt is illegal.

Efficient

A man who was wanted by the police had been photographed in six positions, and the pictures sent out to the state police. In a few days headquarters received this from a small town chief:

"I duly received the pictures of the six miscreants wanted. Five of them have been captured and we are on the trail of the sixth."

Pat Murphy was taking his first flight in an airplane. When up about 3,000 feet, the plane suddenly went into a nose-dive.

"Begorra," admitted Pat, "and 50 per cent of the people up here thought so, too."

Kindling and Block Wood.

"Maybe, Charley," replied the sweet thing, "but don't you think we'd better wait until we get home?"

Dorothy: "Mother, why hasn't papa any hair?"

Mother: "Because he thinks so much, dear."

Dorothy: "And why have you so much, mama?"

Mother: "Go away and play."
